About the School

Pope John XXIII High School, an accredited, coeducational, college preparatory, Roman Catholic High School, founded in 1966, by the Archdiocese of Boston, is an academic community of faith. Many different faces make up the Pope John community. There is no one ideal student. Rather, this is an environment where extraordinary students achieve their personal goals by collaborating with each other. They discover some great friends here – each one building a unique future and succeeding as an individual.

Students who thrive at Pope John do share certain things in common: they get involved and work hard. They respect the process of learning and embrace new challenges with confidence. At Pope John our students grow in ways they can't imagine. They become more responsible and independent, and learn to recognize those risks that are truly worth taking. They are taught to embrace our core values and instill them as part of their everyday life. And, in a few years, as their priorities take shape, they are likely to find themselves rising to positions of leadership that reflect their true ambitions and abilities. Ms. Kathleen F. Donovan is President of Pope John XXIII High School.
